Teaching Philosophy

Our objective as instructors of the game of golf is to take your golf swing and make it work effectively. We try to make minimal changes and work on the fundamentals of the swing. When you finish each session, the improvement will be noticeable and easy to practice. We guarantee each lesson will be a positive experience.

Golf is one of the few games where you cannot teach yourself. If you practice bad habits, you will become a frustrated golfer. It is best to have a trained pair of eyes by qualified, trained PGA Professionals to help you develop good practice and swing habits.

Do you know that on average, Putting consists of 43% of the score, Chipping 13% and Pitching (Shots from within 40 yards of the green) another 8%. Why is it then, most average golfers if and when they do practice, head to the driving range and immediately take out the driver?

Remember, amateurs teach amateurs to play like amateurs.

About The Instructors

Bela Nagy, Director of Golf at Sandridge Golf Club, is a member of the PGA of America since 1996 and a 1995 graduate of the Professional Golf Management Program at Mississippi State University.
